Synopsis of Previous Chapters. Boyd Emerson and "Fingerless" Fraser enter Kalvik, Alaska, and meet young white woman, Cherry Malotte, ho shelters them.

Late one stormy night-Constantine had been gone a week—the two men whom they were expecting blew in dibrough the blinding smother. Balt refused rest or nourishment until he had learned why Cherry had sent for him. As briefly as possible she outlined the situation. Boyd Emerson saw a huge, barrel chested creature whose tremendous muscles bulged beneath his nondescript garments, whose red, upstanding bristle of hair topped a leather countenance from which gleamed a pair of the most violent eyes Emerson had ever beheld, the dominant expression of which was rage. His voice was hoarse with the echo of drumming ratlines. He might have lived forty, sixty years, but every year had been given to the sea; its foaming violence was in his blood.

As the significance of Cherry's words sank into his mind the signs of an un-

AMUSEMENTS. AT THE AIRDOME.

"The Blue Monkey," a three act bunch of nonsense, is the offering at the Airdome this week, and it appears to please as well as usual. There are some very good musical numbers and specialties in the bill, but the offering itself is not up to the usual standard of Airdome

The cast is small, but all those in the parts gave satisfaction to the audience, although Chas. LeRoy spoiled the part of the widow, which he otherwise handled splendidly, by ringing in a regular honkatonk finish with his song specialty. One of the features of the performance was the Toreadore song from "Carmen" by Harry DeVere and chorus. Several other good musical numbers were offered, among the most enjoyable being Peck's "We're All Here to See You Off." The kimino song by Miss Shattuck and chorus was also good.

CASASUS TO ARGUE THE CHAMIZAL CASE.

Mexico Names Former Ambassador as Attorney to Fight Claims of El Paso. The San Antonio Express of Wednesday says that attorney Joaquin Casasus, former Mexican ambassador to the United States, has been named by Don Enrique Creel, minister of foreign relations, to represent Mexico in the Chamizal case involving disputed territory claimed by Mexico and now embodied in the cor-porate limits of El Paso, Texas), as soon as the arbitrator who is to hear the mat-ter for the United States and Mexico is prepared to take the case in hand.

The dispute is to be heard by a board presided over by a Canadian jurist, in accordance with a treaty between the United States and Mexico signed last May. The decision of the board whatever it may be, must be ratified by both governments to become final.
